Infirmary Inmate Commits Suicide John Durbin Takes Life By Hanging

The fear of moving to a strange home is blamed for the suicide early this morning of John T. Durbin, 81, blind resident of the county infirmary.

The lifeless body was found hanging from a rope thrown over a radiator pipe in his single room at the former country club building at 5:20 am by Sam Reinhart, Infirmery Superintendent.

A few hours later, Durbin and the other inmates were to be moved to their new $100,000 home, recently completed to replace the old infirmary destroyed by fire in August, 1941.

Superintendent Reinhart and other inmates told coroner Robert J. Zwick, who investigated, that Durbin had often said he would take his own life rather than move from the familiar surroundings of the country club building, which has been serving as an infirmary. Before he retired last night, Durbin reiterated his statement and asserted that "this is the last time you'll talk to me."

Coroner Zwick placed the time of death about 2:30 or 3 o'clock. Durbin, despite his total blindness, had managed in some manner to smuggle a rope into his room. He threw the rope over the radiator pipe, tied a loop around his neck and stepped off the bed. His feet were touching the floor when he was found. Death was caused by strangulation.

Durbin had been confined in the infirmary since becoming blind about two years ago. He was born in Monroe Township on May 20, 1861 and was never married. He was the last of his family and was a member of the Pleasant Valley Friends Church.

Only near survivors are two nieces, Mrs. Ora Mitchell and Mrs. Henry Cook of Decatur, and a nephew, O. H. Durbin of Watervliet, Mich.

The body will be removed to the Mitchell residence from the Zwick Funeral Home Thursday evening and may be viewed there until time for the services.
